THE CONTINUOUS STORY

Stanley and Michael are saved again by the jealous wife of the Sheikh, she having become repentant. They follow Zoolah and rush to the balloon - they cut the rope. The wind blows the balloon over the water. They shout to her to jump just as the tiger clicks into the car after her. She obeys - leaps into the water and swims ashore. Stanley releases the balloon, which sails skyward with the astonished tiger in the basket.

They help Zoolah, and then Garbo rushes up and recaptures them. By now he desires to kill the two men who continually block his plans.

A band of bandits attack Garbo and steal Zoolah. She is sold to a Turk, who makes her a slave to his five fat wives. She escapes - takes refuge in a cave.

Stanley and Michael are about to be burned at the stake by the bandits for striking their leader. The captive balloon ascends - they catch the rope, are lifted out of the fire - tie the balloon to a tree.

The tiger leaps out and stampedes the bandits. Stanley and Michael capture a bandit and learn where Zoolah is. They hurry on in search of her.

She is in the cave. A huge gorilla traps her and drives her to the edge of a cliff. Either she must jump or be captured by gorilla, who advances with outstretched arms.
